Overview

The Treaty Negotiations Referendum, conducted between April 2 and May 15, 2002, was the largest vote conducted entirely by mail by any provincial jurisdiction. The referendum was conducted pursuant to the Referendum Act [RSBC 1996] Chapter 400, and the Treaty Negotiations Referendum Regulation, which came into effect on March 15, 2002.

The mail-out of voting packages to registered voters commenced April 2nd, and the deadline for requesting a voting package was May 1st. A total of 2,144,759 voting packages were issued.

790,182 voters returned voting materials to Elections BC by the deadline of 4:30 p.m., May 15, 2002. 26,702 were not considered in the ballot count, as they did not meet the requirements of the Treaty Negotiations Referendum Regulation. Of the 763,480 ballots considered, the majority of validly cast votes were in favour of each of the eight questions on the ballot. Pursuant to section 4 of the Referendum Act, the results of the referendum are binding on the government that initiated the referendum.

The Ballot

The ballot contained an opening question, and eight separate statements to which the voter was required to indicate whether they agreed or disagreed by marking either the Yes or No box beside each statement. Elections BC arranged for the translation of the ballot text into fifteen languages, and posted the ballot translation key on our Web site. Voters who did not have access to the Internet could request a printed version of the ballot key by calling our toll-free information line.

The ballot text was as follows:

> Whereas the Government of British Columbia is committed to negotiating workable, affordable treaty settlements that will provide certainty, finality and equality;
> Do you agree that the Provincial Government should adopt the following principles to guide its participation in treaty negotiations?
> 1. Private property should not be expropriated for treaty settlements.
> 2. The terms and conditions of leases and licences should be respected; fair compensation for unavoidable disruption of commercial interests should be ensured.
> 3. Hunting, fishing and recreational opportunities on Crown land should be ensured for all British Columbians.
> 4. Parks and protected areas should be maintained for the use and benefit of all British Columbians.
> 5. Province-wide standards of resource management and environmental protection should continue to apply.
> 6. Aboriginal self-government should have the characteristics of local government, with powers delegated from Canada and British Columbia.
> 7. Treaties should include mechanisms for harmonizing land use planning between Aboriginal governments and neighbouring local governments.
> 8. The existing tax exemptions for Aboriginal people should be phased out.

Who Could Vote

In order to vote in the referendum, individuals had to meet all of the following qualifications:

- Canadian citizen;
- 18 years of age or older on May 15, 2002;
- resident of British Columbia for at least six months immediately before May 15, 2002;
- registered as a voter in British Columbia, or register as such in conjunction with voting; and
- not be disqualified by the Election Act or any other enactment from voting in the referendum.

Voter Information

In early March, Elections BC trained approximately 70 1-800 information operators. The Elections BC information centre's primary purpose during the referendum was to provide voters with voter registration information, information on requesting and completing referendum packages, and other questions related to the referendum process. The toll-free information hours were expanded on March 18, 2002, to ensure public access. Hours of operation for the referendum were 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Monday to Friday and 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Saturdays. From March 18, 2002, to May 17, 2002, the information centre operators assisted over 30,300 voters across the Province.

In March, an independent Referendum Office was established by Government. The Referendum Office's role was to answer inquiries regarding referendum ballot questions, limiting the scope of questions Elections BC would handle. The Referendum Office sent an information brochure to all households in British Columbia in March. The householder explained the distinct roles of the BC Referendum Office and Elections BC. It also provided toll-free telephone numbers and Web site addresses for both offices.

During the week of April 15, Elections BC placed an advertisement in local newspapers across the Province to remind voters of the May 1, 2002, 4:30 p.m., deadline to request a mail-in referendum package. On April 24, 2002, Elections BC also issued a province-wide news release to media outlets to ensure that voters were made aware of the May 1, 2002, deadline.

Why Vote by Mail?

Voting by mail is used extensively by many jurisdictions, most notably the state of Oregon. In British Columbia, voting by mail has been available since 1986 when it was first made available to voters who were out of the Province during an election. The availability of voting by mail has since been extended to any voter who is outside the Province during an election, or who is unable to reach a voting place due to remoteness of location, weather, or any other reason beyond their control. In the 2001 general election, approximately 2,300 individuals voted by mail.

Voting by mail was an option for the referendum because Elections BC has a scanned image of every registered voter's signature, thereby permitting us to validate voting packages to ensure that only registered voters voted. The signature file is maintained by Elections BC to permit the validation of signatures on recall and initiative petitions under the Recall and Initiative Act. Without the signature file, Elections BC would not be confident in administering a binding vote by mail, as the integrity of the process could be questioned.

The vote-by-mail option was estimated to cost approximately half as much as a ballot box vote, depending on participation rates.

The Voting Package

The voting package was modeled on the package currently used for Alternative Absentee Voting under the Election Act. Each package contained a ballot, a secrecy envelope to separate the marked ballot from the identity of the voter, a certification envelope which contained the voter's name, residential address and signature, an instruction brochure and a postage-paid return envelope. The return envelope was a distinctive yellow, and bore the Canada Post "Vote by Mail" logo. Elections BC received a preferred postage rate in exchange for using the Canada Post logo, and the yellow envelope facilitated priority handling in mail sorting and delivery.

The certification envelope for registered voters was pre-printed with the voter's name, residential and mailing addresses, and a bar code of their voter registration number. Each voter was required to sign a declaration on the face of the envelope.

For unregistered voters, or voters who had moved and did not receive their personalized package, a separate package was produced. The certification envelope in this package was not pre-printed with any personal information, and the package included an application form for individuals who were registering in conjunction with voting.

Voting packages were produced for 2,127,829 registered voters, and were mailed between April 2nd and 12th. Voters who did not automatically receive a package were able to call Elections BC toll-free until May 1st to request a voting package. An additional 16,930 voting packages were issued on request.

Voter Registration and Updates

Individuals who were not already registered to vote were able to register in conjunction with voting. The voting packages issued to such individuals included an application for registration. Individuals were required to complete the application and to provide photocopies of two pieces of identification that, in combination, show their name, residential address and signature.

A total of 2,534 new registrations were received in conjunction with voting.

The certification envelope included a name and address change form for registered voters. A total of 35,337 updates to voter information were processed during the referendum.

Processing Voting Packages

790,182 voters returned voting materials to Elections BC by the deadline of May 15th. Upon receipt, the returned packages were opened and the certification envelopes were removed. All packages sent to registered voters were pre-printed with the voter's name, residential and mailing address, and a bar code of their voter registration number. The bar code on each envelope was scanned by an operator, and the corresponding signature on file for the voter was displayed on a computer screen. If the file signature matched the signature on the certification envelope, the operator accepted the envelope and made a notation on the voter's record that they had voted.

Voters who had requested a voting package, but who were already registered, were located on the voters list, their signatures verified, and a notation made that they had voted. Certification envelopes from individuals who were registering in conjunction with voting were processed after all other certification envelopes had been dealt with. This was to ensure that no duplicate registrations or double voting occurred.

Accepted envelopes were then sorted by electoral district, and the secrecy envelopes containing marked ballots were removed and separated from the certification envelopes. At the end of the voting period on May 15th, ballot counting commenced. 10,643 packages were received after the deadline, and were not included in the count.

A total of 26,702 voting materials received by the deadline were not included in the ballot count for the following reasons:

Certification envelope not signed	11,393
Signature did not match	2,282
Envelope did not contain a ballot	996
Envelope contained more than one ballot	43
No certification envelope	10,952
Voter not registered	1,036

Ballot Counting

The referendum legislation and regulations did not establish a process for registering Yes and No groups. As a result, there was no source of external scrutineers for the ballot count. To ensure consistency, a second count was implemented. All ballots were considered and counted by a referendum official, and then reviewed and the counts validated by a different official. This process ensured that all ballots were reviewed and counted twice, with any discrepancies referred to an Elections BC manager for resolution. All referendum officials were required to take an oath of secrecy and impartiality prior to commencing their duties.

Ballot counting and reconciliation was completed on July 2, 2002, and a report of the results of the referendum was provided to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly on July 3rd. The results of the referendum are based on a simple majority of validly cast votes, and are binding on the government that initiated it. Validly cast votes are those votes accepted as Yes or No – rejected votes are not included in the calculation of the threshold of 50 percent plus 1. The majority of votes were cast in favour of all eight questions posed on the ballot. Detailed results by electoral district are in the Appendices to this report.

Summary of Results

26,702 individuals returned voting materials by the deadline that were not considered during the ballot count because they did not meet the requirements of the Treaty Negotiations Referendum Regulation.

763,480 ballots were considered during the count, representing 35.84% of total registered voters.

Legal Challenges

Two injunction applications were filed with the Supreme Court of British Columbia in relation to the referendum. The first application, by Ke-Kin-Is-Uks, also known as Judith Sayers, and the Hupacasath First Nation, was heard by the Honourable Mr. Justice Robert Hutchison on March 26, 2002. The application sought an injunction to restrain the Chief Electoral Officer from mailing out the referendum ballots. Justice Hutchison dismissed the application in reasons for judgment delivered March 27, 2002.

The second application was made by Wilson Bob, Robert Sam, Roderick Naknakim, Mavis Ericson and Lydia Hwitsum before the Honourable Madam Justice D.M. Smith on May 6 and 7, 2002. This application sought to enjoin the Chief Electoral Officer from counting the ballots or announcing the results of the referendum. The application was dismissed.

The matter of Ke-Kin-Is-Uks v. Her Majesty the Queen was further heard before the Honourable Mr. Justice James Shabbits on a point of law. The Statement of Claim alleged that the Treaty Negotiations Referendum Regulation was invalid, inoperative and ultra vires the Referendum Act. Justice Shabbits reserved his decision until June 27, 2002, at which time he issued his reasons for judgment upholding the Regulation and dismissing the application.

Independent legal counsel for the Chief Electoral Officer attended the hearings before Justices Hutchison and Smith to assist the court and the parties with information regarding the status and costs of the referendum process, but took no position on the merits of the applications. Legal counsel for the Chief Electoral Officer did not participate in proceedings before Justice Shabbits.

Issues and Concerns

Voters who were concerned that their package would not reach Elections BC by the deadline were able to hand deliver their package to any Government Agent. However, there are no Government Agent locations in Greater Vancouver or the western Fraser Valley. Due to budget reductions and resulting restructuring, Elections BC no longer has regional offices in those areas. As a result, a large percentage of voters had no option other than to return their package by mail. If future votes are conducted in this manner, it would be appropriate to establish drop-off locations in the portions of the Province not served by Government Agents to provide an alternative for voters.

Six voting packages returned to Elections BC were provided to the police or disposed of in a secure manner due to apparent contamination. None of the suspect materials posed a real threat to our staff. Due to "powdery substance" concerns, we had taken the precautionary steps of training staff in hazardous mail handling and insisted that all staff handling referendum materials wear gloves. All mail handling and preliminary sorting was conducted at a separate facility for security reasons.

Over 2,000 letters and written comments were received from voters during the referendum. A number of voters expressed concern that there was no mechanism to cast a "protest vote", or to have a means of influencing the outcome of the referendum other than to vote Yes or No. Such concerns are not unique to this referendum. Similar concerns that there is not a "none of the above" option on election ballots have also been expressed by voters.

Many voters returned their ballots without the certification envelope, or with the declaration on the certification envelope unsigned. These votes were not considered in the count, as it was not possible to ensure that they were cast by registered voters, and that no individual voted more than once. The very limited time between the passage of the Treaty Negotiations Referendum Regulation and the date established for the issuance of voting packages precluded a voter education campaign. We believe that the significant number of ballots that were not considered in the count could have been reduced through voter education. Voters may not have understood the need for the signed certification envelope, and the mechanisms in place to ensure the secrecy of the vote and prevent the identification of the individual who cast a specific ballot. If future votes are conducted in this manner, sufficient time and resources should be allocated to voter education to address this issue.

Approximately 7 percent of the voting packages issued were returned to Elections BC as undeliverable. The most common reason for return was that the voter had moved and their mail was not being forwarded to their new address. A number of voters who previously had rural postal addresses have had their postal address changed by Canada Post, but did not advise Elections BC of the change. We have approached Canada Post to explore the possibility of including a reminder to their clients to notify us of their address change when rural postal addresses are discontinued.

Over 80 percent of our voter records are automatically updated by the Motor Voter program, which provides Elections BC with address updates from the Insurance Corporation of BC. However, although it is incumbent on the voter to advise us of any change to their name, residential address or mailing address, many individuals do not update their voter record until an election. This can be problematic during referenda, and in relation to recall and initiative petitions.

Due to production difficulties encountered by the printer, a small number of duplicate packages were issued to voters. These packages were carefully monitored to ensure that voters in receipt of duplicates did not vote twice. This issue has been discussed with the printer and appropriate safeguards will be put in place for any future projects of this nature.

Cost of Referendum

Vote-by-mail is less costly than traditional ballot box votes, as fewer staff are required and no voting place rentals are necessary. The single largest cost item for vote-by-mail is the postage, which is partially dependent on participation rates.

The original estimate for the referendum was $9 million. This estimate assumed participation by 2 million voters, and voter registration and updates of approximately 10 percent. As participation and voter registration rates were significantly lower than what the estimate was based on, the actual cost was much less. Voter participation was approximately 36 percent, and voter registration was less than 1 percent. As a result, fewer staff were required, data entry volumes were lower, and return postage costs were much less than anticipated. The Queen's Printer and Canada Post both provided excellent service to Elections BC, and also played a significant role in reducing costs associated with the event.
